The Basement Membrane Extract (BME)-free Database provides an overview of commercial hydrogel- and coating-based products for in vitro applications wherefore BME is commonly used. Although every effort has been made to ensure the details contained are correct and up to date, the 3RCU cannot be held responsible for any inaccuracies. For full up-to-date information on any product listed in the database, it is recommended that you contact the manufacturer or supplier directly. The list of cell types is solely based on the information provided by the suppliers. The 3RCU cannot verify whether these cell types can be successfully grown using the product. Cell types listed solely in application notes are excluded and are not listed in the product information.

Despite the ongoing care and attention we devote to our websites, it is possible that they may contain incorrect information. We ask for your understanding and hope that you will give us the opportunity to correct any errors or omissions. Please contact us with the contact information at the bottom of the page.
